Et to So Attenuated as to Be Often Mistaken for Breakbone Fever, Says Dr. Hava-Epidemie at Natchez Again Stirs Up the Shotgun Quarantines

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 28 .- Dr. Audrian Have, who has made a close study of rellow fever and the transmission of the sase by the mosquito, announces that the mild type of the disease which is most which shows itself in every epidemic, where nous at Patterson this year, but the disease is so light as to be frequently mistaken for dengue (breakbone fever) and the death rate is less than 1 per cent. is due to infection by mosquitoes that are not infected by biting a person sick of the vellow fever, but are hatched from the eggs of such a mosquito the infection being carried to the second generation. Dr Have has accepted the theory laid down by the French yellow fever commission which has been studying the disease in Brazil for two years, and which published Its report only recently in Paris. The doctrine laid down by him is as follows: If a female Stepomyia fasciata, or house mosquito, feeds on a yellow fever patient during the first three or four days of the attack, it may transmit the yellow fever to a non-immune after twelve days from the date of its infection, and may continue to inoculate the poison to non-immunes during its natural life.

More than that, the eggs that it deposits come forth infected, but with an attenuated virus, which may produce in a non-immune a mild type of yellow fewver, often mistaken for dengue. These mos-quitoes remain infected, as is the case with the mother, as long as they live, and the females during their whole existence are capable of communicating the poison

The male stegomyia originating from an infected mother, though hatched infected, cannot transmit the poison, nature having denied to him the necessary organ to feed on mankind; but as the female has to perpetuate her species, nature has pro-vided her with the means of getting blood, the most nutritious food obtainable, in order that her eggs may have all the constituents necessary for the subsequent stages of evo-

The severe cases of yellow fever are those arising from direct inoculation by the Stegomyta faccida, of the yellow fever poison from a patient to a non-immune. The mild cases are the result of an inoculation by a mosquito, in which the virus has been attenuated through hereditary trans-mission, a mosquito hatched from an egg deposited by an infected mother. As the infected and reproduces many mosquitoes with the attenuated virus were more infected and reproduces many mosquitoes with the attenuated virus, we see more cases of mild than of severe yellow fever.

Dr. Hava concludes from that yellow fever can be so attenuated in this way as to be without danger, so that troops or laborers going from a high latitude into the yellow fever zones may render themselves immune and safe against the fever by subjecting themselves to being bitten by the progeny of the infected mosquito, in which the yellow fever germ exists in a very modified or attenuated form. This theory of the French yellow fever commission has not yet been accepted by the United States Marine Hospital service or American physicians, and has not been even tested by them. The present epidemic will probably result in a test being made.

Engel & Oppenheimer. The referee decided in favor of the latter firm on these seventeen laims. This gave them a victory later on when a trustee was voted for.

There were two candidates for trustee-Emanuel W. Bloomingdale, the present receiver, represented by Hays & Hershfield, and Anton Schmid, an accountant, of 93 Nassau street, nominated by Engel, Engel & Oppen Anton Schmid, an accountant, of 63 Nassau street, nominated by Engel, Engel & Oppenheimer. The referee announced the vote as follows: Mr. Bloomingdale, fifty claims aggregating $106,345, and Mr. Schmid, seventy-four claims, aggregating $107,282, and declared Mr. Schmid elected, subject to the correctness of the vote when each claim was carefully computed. The bond of the trustee was fixed at $190,000. His election was regarded as a victory for the Schloas interest, which owned the Castle Braid Company.

A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Louis Phelps, Joseph Phelps, Bernard Phelps and Bernard Michael, who compose the firm of Phelps, Michael & Co., clothing manufacturers at 661 Broadway, by Hays & Hershfield. It was alleged that they are insolvent, and that on May 28 they made payment of $5,000 to creditors to prefer them and transferred part of their property to creditors.

Louis Phelps was formerly in business in New Orleans and came to this city in 1880. He became a partner in the firm of L. & A. Michael, who were succeeded by L. Michael & Co. After the death of L. Michael in November, 1901, Mr. Phelps formed the present irm. Ex. Assemblyman M. R. Ryttenberg, attorney for Phelps, Michael & Co., said that they had been going behind since January, their credit had been curtailed, business had been poor, they had to sacrifice goods to pay maturing obligations and made some large losses by failures of others. The liabilities are about 350,000, nominal assets $40,000, and actual assets $15,000.

KILLED IN HOFFMAN HOUSE. Elevator Man Crushed Between His Car and Floor Roof.

John Gannon, who had been an elevator operator at the Hoffman House for the last wenty years, made his last trip yesterday afternoon. It was in response to a call from the fifth floor on the Twenty-fifth street side of the building. There was no passenger in the elevator, and nothing was een of it for several minutes.

Meanwhile the bell ringing in the eleva tor from an impatient guest on the fifth floor drew a chambermaid's attention. She found the elevator stopped by Gannon's body, which was crushed between the floor of the elevator and the roof of the second floor. Apparently he had been killed instantly.

How Gannon happened to be caught is a matter of varie surmise, by the hotel matter of vague surmise by the hotel management. They do not believe that he stopped at the second floor, or some one would have noticed his plight. They guessed that he was taken sick in the elegators and opened the door at the second vator, and opened the door at the second floor without stopping the car.

WOMAN BUYS VAGRANT LOT. It Strays From Tuckahoe Into Yonkers

With the Help of the Bronx River. YONKERS Aug. 28.-After buying a plot of land supposed to be in the town of East Chester, Mrs. Catherine Connolly of Tuckahoe finds that she is in the city of Yonkers, and that both Yonkers and East Chester have her lot assessed. The changing of the course of the Bronx River is supposed to have caused the trouble.

On May 17 Mrs. Connolly bought a building lot in Yonkers Park. She made the purchase under the impression that her property was in the village of Tuckahoe When she was about to build she was told that part of her lot was in Yonkers, and that she had best submit plans to the building inspector of this city. For some reason Mrs. Connolly is prejudiced against holding real estate here and she was greatly disappointed. This morning she visited building Inspector Myers, and he conducted her to the office of the Board of Assessors, where still more unwelcome news awaited her. The assessors said that lot 2, block 17, Yonkers Park, which is Mrs. Connolly's lot, was entirely inside the city limits and was assessed and taxed by the city of Yonkers.

It appears that the course of the Bronx River, which was the dividing line, has changed er, which was the dividing line, has changed and that only a part of the lot now lies on this side of the river, the village of Tuck ahoe claiming the other part as within its jurisdiction. She was still more perplexed when informed that the lot is to be taxed in the town of East Chester also.

IRISH VOLUNTEERS IN BATTLE.

TWO GUNS CAPTURED IN GREAT CHARGE AT PALACE HALL.

Custodian Noian Turns the Enemy's Flank With the Aid of Cops-Capt. O'Rourke and Staff Prisoners of War-Old Fight Renewed in Williamsburg Company.

By the arraignment in the Lee avenue police court, Williamsburg, yesterday of three officers of the Irish Volunteers of Brooklyn, Capt. Michael F. O'Rourke of 110 Montague street, Sergt. Edward Brady of 404 Park avenue and Corporal John Houlihan of 158 North Seventh street, a spirited conflict between two factions which took place in Palace Hall, Grand street, near Wythe avenue, on Sunday evening, was revealed. The three were accused of stealing two rifles, valued at $50, the complainant being Richard Nolan, a former Captain, who also held the office of custodian of records.

For several months before the volunteers were disbanded by the Adjutant-General some time ago there were factional fights, and it was these that brought about the final disruption of the organization in the Williamsburg section. O'Rourke organized a new contingent, Company E, and he was made Captain. The men who, as his faction put it, had caused so much trouble in the old organization were left out of the new. Although the disbandment of the old organization, which was known as Company A, abolished Nolan's office of custodian and his title of Captain be retained both and refused to surrender the twenty-nine rifles that had belonged to the volunteers.

Late on Sunday afternoon the new Irish

Late on Sunday afternoon the new Irish Volunteers, with Capt. O'Rourke in command, and attired in full regalia, proceeded to Palace Hall to take possession of the rifles and other munitions of war, by force if necessary. There were thirty in line. On reaching the hall they discovered that Nolan and his followers, numbering thirtyone, had forestalled them and were in possession of everything on the stage. O'Rourke gave the order to charge, but before the order was carried into effect two cops from the Bedford avenue police station, who had been sent to the hall in a hurry on a telephone message that trouble was brewing, stepped between the warring factions and counseled moderation. They were hustled aside, and O'Rourke's men dashed upon the stage, where they were met by their rivals and a lively setto ensued. Some of the men punched each other, and when order was finally restored Nolan discovered that the enemy had captured two rifles.

So much fuss followed this discovery that in order to avoid a further conflict the policemen ordered all to march to the police station, where the men were lined up before the sergeant's desk and Sergt. Wills undertook to get at the bottom of the trouble. He held O'Rourke, Brady and Houlihan on Nolan's complaint.

The men were afterward released and nouman on Noian's complaint.

The men were afterward released on bail. On being arraigned yesterday in court O'Rourke explained the factional fight in the organization. Magistrate Higginbotham paroled O'Rourke pending a hearing next Tuesday and discharged the two other.

THE TALE OF THE BUSY BEE Who Found Honey Ready Made in a Candy Making Plant.

The little busy bee-some five thousand of him-has been improving the shining in the manufacturing plant of a candy concern at 54 Barclay street. The home of the robber bees is at 44 Vesey street, on the top of a tall building. Secure in their lofty castle, these modern robber barons sally forth to take toll of the neighboring fruit stands or make more adventurous forays among the molasses hogsheads on the wharves.

The favorite and most fruitful field of operation for the bees is George W. Loft's andy factory. The bees discovered it last spring and got busy at once. "They last spring and got busy at once. "They came in armies," said an employee of the place, "and raided everything in sight. Then they'd skip out to the hives, unload and come back for more. They must have stolen thousands of pounds of sugar."

After a while the bees thought they knew all that was doing in the wholesale end of the business and wandered down stairs to take a look at the retail denartment. It's of the business and wandered down stairs to take a look at the retail department. It's very pleasant down there. A long line of young women may have been mistaken by the bees for honeymaking material, Anyway, peek-a-boo shirt waists went suddenly out of fashion.

A few days ago the proprietor, who had been figuring on his losses, walked meditatively through the store and ran against a bee that had got a vanilla flavor when he asked for chocolate and was mad about it. "Stung again!" said the proprietor, and at once appealed to the Board of Health. An inspector came to investigate, and went up on the roof of 44 Vesey street to view the enemy on his native heath. He came down quickly, and was supposed by ignorant persons to have suddenly acquired a full grown case of mumps. His report was not fit to print, and the investi-gation is still pending. At 44 Vesey the mystery of the bees is made clear by the sign:

A. & I. ROOT CO. Bee Supplies. Honey, Beeswax.

In the office there was no sign of bees or beeswax, but a young woman explained, "We keep the bees to demonstrate with," she said. "When we want to show a customer a new kind of hive or a new beekeeper's mask, all we have to do is to take him up on the roof and demonstrate with real bees.

"No, there are not 5,000,000 in the hives on the roof. I don't believe there are more than 3,000,000. and. anyway, bee In the office there was no sign of bees or more than 3,000,000, and, anyway, bee stings are good for people, so I don't see where the Health Department comes in." The bee suprly man keeps comb to feed his exhibits on, but they prefer to forage for themselves. There are no clover blooms nearer than Central Park, and that seems to be beyond the range of the Vesey street bees. Perhaps they prefer the graft in their own precinct. their own precinct.

DESERTED CHILDREN PARTED. John W. Rogers and Wife May Have Sailed to Europe-Their Check Forged. ALBANY, Aug. 28.-There was a pitiful scene at the Hotel Ten Eyck this afternoon when Rex Rogers, 6 years old, was told that he was to be taken to the Lathron Memorial Home for Children and that his baby brother, 6 months old, was to be taken to St. Margaret's Home for Babies. These are the two children abandoned by their parente, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Rogers of San Francisco and Washington. Rex is a sturdy little fellow. Not a whimper has escaped him because of his parents' absence and he has devoted most of his time to amusing his baby brother, who has been looked after by a nurse from St. Margaret's Home.

The first sign of a breakdown in Maste Rex came when he was told he was to be separated from his little brother, and strategy had to be used to get him to the orphan asylum. He was asked to take a carriage ride and reluctantly consented Arriving at the institution, the boy refused to alight, saying he wanted to go back to his little brother Jack. Finally the superintendent of the asylum picked up the lad and carried him in. Even then there was no outcry, the boy doggedly submitting.

Letters left behind by Rogers would indicate that he and his wife sailed for Europe dicate that he and his wife sailed for Euroje on the Campania on Saturday. In an effort to bead him off on the other side Judge Mulfelder to-day issued a warrant for his arrest.

DESERTER'S FATE.

Hungry and Tired, He Says Bowery Life Is a Snare and a Delusion.

Fagged out by hunger and want, Frederick Young, 18 years old, handed himself over to Policeman Bligh of the Multerry street station yesterday, saying that he was a deserter from the battleship Colorade.
When arraigned before Magistrate Finn When arraigned before Magistrate Finin the Tombs police court Young said that he came from a town near Boston, enlisted in the navy in January, 1903, and deserted from his ship three weeks ago.

"Bowery life proved a snare and a delusion," he said, "and I am willing to return. Magistrate Finn turned him over to the Brooklyn navy yard authorities.
